Mobile Access to Drug Information Portal

The National Library of Medicine (NLM) Drug Information Portal at <http://druginfo.nlm.nih.gov/m.drugportal> has now been optimized for mobile devices. This free resource covers over 32,000 drugs and provides descriptions, drug names, pharmaceutical categories, and chemical structure diagrams. Each record features links to 19 other resources, mostly mobile, including PubMed, LactMed, and Drugs@FDA.

The Drug Information Portal provides a user-friendly avenue to other key government agencies under both the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the FDA. Choose an information path categorized by audience, ranging from consumer health sources to pharmacogenomics research sites. Choose by drug class, from investigational to prescription, and search results may include clinical trials, AIDS-related information, MeSH pharmacological actions, biomedical literature, and physical properties of drugs. Drug Information Portal is both a very in-depth, and an almost all-encompassing, resource for the development and dissemination of pharmaceutical knowledge.

Visit: <http://druginfo.nlm.nih.gov> to access Drug Information Portal, or for the mobile version, go to <http://druginfo.nlm.nih.gov/m.drugportal>. Smart Phones accessing the main site are automatically re-routed to the mobile site.
